1. Add an (advanced) setting to allow this function to use the package name of the package on which users' mouse is when merging packages:

"Instead, the package name SHOULD be auto filled in based on what your mouse is over when your right-click and select "Move to New Package". Frankly, even if it doesn't I can live with this, but it would be more intuitive."

2. Respect the users selected "subfolder by packagename" setting.

3. [This might be more general as this dialog also happens when you simply set a download directory.] If the downloaddir does not exist, JD will ask to create a folder --> Add a "dont ask again" setting for that.
